Consul General Gabriel Die Ravindal and the American consulate at Beirut, Syria.

Beirut, Syria.—Funds from sympathetic Americans are pouring in for the relief of the stricken districts of Syria. Under the direction of the Turkish relief committee, of which American Consul General Gabriel Die Ravindal, stationed at Beirut, Syria, is chairman, $10,000 have been raised and much more is coming in from private sources.

Mr. Ravindal entered the diplomatic service of the United States with his appointment to Beirut, Syria, in 1898, where he served successfully for seven years. In 1905 he was appointed consul at Dawson, Yukon territory, Canada, and the following year was returned to Beirut, Syria, as consul general. He is a Norwegian by birth, is 44 years old and a graduate of the Royal university of Norway. His business prior to entering the diplomatic service was that of a newspaper publisher in North Dakota. The American home is in Sioux Falls, S. D.

Under Mr. Ravindal's direction the American interests in Syria have developed and since the recent atrocities by the Turks against the Armenians,

It is good fortune to be able to assist in a material way the survivors. The Turkish relief committee was organized under his direction and he was made chairman. This affords an opportunity for these sympathizing to assist directly this afflicted nation. The American consulate at Beirut is of typical Syrian architecture and were it not for the stars and stripes flying proudly over the court it would not be distinguishable from the other surrounding buildings.

NATIONAL LAWN TENNIS STAR AND ALL AROUND ATHLETE. MISS ELENORA SEARS.

Houston.—Among the crack women tennis players of the country who hold enviable records and are among the topnotchers is Miss Elenora of Houston. She is not only a star tennis player, both in singles and doubles and mixed matches, but is one of the best amateur woman swimmers in the country, excelled by few. She is also a daring horseback rider and an expert pony polo player. Recently in California she wanted to enter a match with men polo players, wearing trousers for order the better to play, but the Californians turned her down. In a rage, she declared she could play as well as any of the men and would organize a team of woman players that would defeat any team of men that would meet them. In an interview not long ago she is credited with declaring that the young Newport men were "bissies" and she had no use for such people.

Washington, D. C.—Two changes in the officers in the battleship New Jersey, W. H. H. Sutherland and Lieut. Commander Hourigan were detached from sea duty to take up important posts on land.

Capt. W. H. H. Sutherland, who commanded the battleship on the cruise of Admiral Evans' fleet around the world, was ordered to report at Newport, R. I., where he will join the naval examining board. He has seen a wide variety of naval service and is one of the most popular commanders under Uncle Sam's flag.

Lieutenant Commander Hourigan was ordered to report to Washington and has also been detached from duty on the New Jersey. His popularity with the crew was tangibly shown when he was leaving the ship. They cheered him as he left the ship until he was out of sight on shore.

The meeting in Milwaukee was attended by 150 delegates from the thirty-three states and members of the association which has a total membership of twenty thousand retail hardware dealers throughout the United States. Charles Williams of St. Paul, Minn., is president of the association but it is probable that at the next meeting in 1910, to be held in Denver, the election will be given the honor by the election of Mr. McNamara to this office.

MAKING ALL PLANS FOR BIG GATHERING

Old Fellows' Convention Will Fill the City With Strangers During Coming Week.
That Janesville expects to entertain a large delegation of Old Fellows from all parts of the state, is evidenced by the preparations that are being made for the entertainment of these visitors at the hotels and restaurants.

The city is also going to be gay with music and strolling bands, and every effort will be made to give the Old Fellows who will be here to attend the big state gathering.

The various committees, who have charge of the decorations, reception, balls and program all report that everything is progressing satisfactorily and all that is necessary now to make the entertainment a complete success is good weather. Arrangements have been made to have local members meet every incoming train on Monday and Tuesday so that delegates will have no difficulty in finding their rooms and the proper place to register. Visiting delegates will first be conducted from the trains to the city hall where they will register and they will then be shown to the houses where they will remain during the time of the session. Every house has been listed so that when the hotels are unable to take care of the crowd, there will be no delay or trouble in securing quarters.

It is expected that the Milwaukee delegates will arrive on the early morning train on Tuesday, while the Monday afternoon train will bring in many from other parts of the state. The anxiety, caused by the non-arrival of the delegates, was dispelled this morning when the committee judges and delegate judges for both Old Fellows and Rebekah delegates were received. Both the committee and delegate judges have red ribbons but the committee judges have the word "committee" on the pin in place of the word "Rebekah". The ribbon on the Rebekah badge is pink and green with the society's emblem on a medallion which hangs from the ribbon.

He could not see how the parcel could have fallen from the buggy and consequently decided that the parcel had been stolen.

LEVY'S REDS BEATEN BY SKELLY'S BLUES

Business Men's Baseball Teams Have Spirited Game at Athletic Park.

Old-time ball players and beginners were present at Athletic Park yesterday afternoon to see the game between Levy's Reds and G. W. Skelly's Blues. In the first game of the Business Men's class of the Y. M. C. A. The slight was played one worth while as the players scuffled around the bases. Levy's team was defeated, but that did not matter so much as it was the first game and everybody enjoyed themselves thoroughly.

The score was 7 to 6 at the end of the fifth inning, when they ceased playing. The pitching of William Dougherty for Levy's team was phenomenal at times. G. W. Skelly for the other side was appropriately named "The Outlinch the Second." Levy's players were first to bat, three reaching the home plate before they went to the field. When Skelly's men came to bat they managed to swing the ball for four runs, in the next inning there was "nothing doing" on either side, but in the third a hit by Dougherty, a stolen base and a two-bagger by C. B. Stott gave Levy's team six points. Levy's Reds failed to score after this, but in the fifth Skelly's Blues went after Dougherty and managed to get three safe hits off him. Most of the runs were secured on singles, the only exception being a three-bagger by J. C. Kline and a two-bagger hit by Walter Taylor. Stanley Dunwiddie and Stanley Woodard did excellent work with the stick, while the sensational slide of Haeckel to second base was a feature of the game. The next game will be played Friday, June 4, at four o'clock.

The choir will have special music for each service. Next Sunday evening Prof. J. S. DEEP WATERWAYMEN PLEDGE THE CITIES TO EARNEST EFFORT

Convinced That Project Of Making Rock River Navigable Is Practical They Will Spare No Effort Toward Its Accomplishment.

Janesville people who attended the meeting of the executive committee of the Rock River Improvement association at the city hall yesterday afternoon, somewhat to their surprise, perhaps, that interest in the proposed deep waterway from Madison to the Mississippi has been aroused to a high pitch among the neighbors both south and north of here. At Rockford, for instance, the people are looking forward to the restoration of the once beautiful Rock river, now a worthless swamp which can never be reclaimed for any useful purpose whatsoever, under existing conditions.

To Restore Rock River Lake.
Editor A. A. Washburn, in the course of his address, told how the lake was destroyed in 1868 or '69 by removal, in accordance with a supreme court decision, of a small dam on the outlet. Prior to that time it had been a great stretch of water, over 16 miles long and six miles wide, dotted with many little wooded islands which were the sites of cabins and summer homes. After it was degraded to a swamp the Dana shooting club rented 18,000 acres in the central area for $100 a year. The marsh land was not worth ten cents an acre, but netting on the supposition that the land could be reclaimed, the Illinois park four years ago bought the 18,000 acres at $10 an acre and prepared to carry out a drainage scheme which involved the removal of the Hustford dam, located ten miles below Rockford. The Hustford people made a bitter fight on this proposition and the supreme court ruled that the dam was to stay in place. It backs water almost to Rockford. Thus, the avenue on which the marsh owners had counted was blocked and all hope of converting the area into dry land had to be abandoned. It is a constant annoyance to the people living in that region and they would gladly welcome the consummation of a plan to convert it into a big reservoir for supplying the Rock river channel with water in dry seasons. A dam four miles and ten feet high would turn the trick and there would immediately be available for all emergencies and immense volume of water—36 square miles of it. In an emergency this great area should be lowered two feet without spoiling the lake or doing any great injury. Editor Washburn and a number of other public spirited citizens, when they heard that there was to be a meeting in Janesville, met and quickly arranged to send a delegate here and Mr. Washburn worked all night, getting his private business in order, so that he could come here yesterday.

Millions Going to Waste.
Rev. Joseph Gordon of Holst stated that 100,000 horses power, worth $20 a unit, was annually going to waste on the Rock River. When this waste was challenged as mere theory, by Capt. Narrows, Mr. Gordon appealed to statistics furnished by eminent engineers as Lyman E. Cooley and Major Hilt. In the course of the friendly talk he also said that although unfortunate enough to be connected with the ministry, it did not necessarily follow that he could not see things which were easy to grasp, even if they did deal with business. The proposed improvement would increase the population of the Rock river valley by 500,000. If Lake Winnebago, which the Fox river with its twelve locks within a distance of 30 miles connects with Green Bay, could be hitched onto the system by a short canal to Fond du Lac, there would never be any question of water.

Dam Business, Good Business.
P. A. Watson, a shoe manufacturer at Dixon, Ill., who was formerly interested in a power plant there, described the immense profits which accrue from dams rightly managed. The company had built a dam at a cost of $60,000; realized nearly half that amount on their investment in a very short period; accumulated a sinking fund of $30,000 in an incredibly short time; and had sold out their property for $107,000 in the course of but a few years. He had been anxious to get back into the dam business over since. The project of deepening the channel of the river for navigation and power was the righted, he thought, by every possible viewpoint. Mr. Watson's statements gave much assurance to the listeners who had been entertaining some doubts as to the practicability of the plan and he was applauded to the echo.

Success Of Hennepin Canal.
John M. Stager of Hennepin, secretary of the executive committee, declared that the Hennepin canal, connecting his home city with the Mississippi river at Rock Island, had meant an annual saving to that city of $80,000; that a boat line had been established by the citizens; and that freight rates had been materially reduced.

Will Push The Project.
Victor P. Richardson offered a motion to the effect that all the cities represented, declare themselves, by the said representatives, heartily in favor of the project and this motion was carried by unanimous vote. On motion of George S. Parker, Mr. Washburn was elected a member of the executive committee. Government Engineer L. L. Wheeler is to visit Rockford during the coming week. A vote of thanks was extended to Capt. Washburn and the other visitors for their interest and assistance in clearing up some of the preliminary problems following adjournment the executive committee met with Chairman Haeckel of Rockford and secured him of their cooperation in securing the data which must be filed at Washington before July 1 for the consideration of the Rivers and Harbors committee.

One Worthless Without The Other.
"Experience," said Uncle Eben, "may be a good teacher, but she's liable to make folks spend a heap o' valuable time studyin' after school leavin' the rudiments of common sense."

MORGAN'S AIR SHIP ON ITS INITIAL TRIP

Went for Several Rods Some Little Distance Off the Ground This Morning.

Hiram Morgan, the son of F. W. Morgan, who owns the stock farm near Holst, took his initial trip in an airship of his own construction this morning, by rising several feet from the ground and going for some rods. The airship is not yet finished but Mr. Morgan expects he will be able to make a more extended trip within a few weeks. It is propelled by a gasoline engine and is eighteen feet long with a tail of some sixteen feet in length. Mr. Morgan, who plays golf at the Mississippi links, is most enthusiastic over the prospects of his ultimate success and it is said will bring the machine to the gold links here later in the summer to give a demonstration.

FIND BANDITS IN THEIR LAIR

BOYS AID OMAHA POLICE TO CAPTURE TRAIN ROBBER SUSPECTS.

WILL RECEIVE A BIG REWARD

Union Pacific Has Offered $5,000 for Each of Hold-Up Men Arrested—Rifled Mail Bags Are Found in Schoolhouse Attic.

Omaha, Neb., May 20.—Three Omaha schoolboys will share in a reward which may reach $20,000 should the three suspects arrested in connection with the Union Pacific train robbery prove to be the bandits. Chief of Police Briggs and two detectives made the arrests and will have to divide with the boys.

Prod Tortenson and W. D. Woods, two of the prisoners, were identified by Engineer Micklejohn and Fireman Prawl as the men who crawled over the tender of their engine and forced them to stop the train.

A warrant was issued by the United States court against all three men and they were arraigned before Commissioner Anderson today on a charge of robbing the mail.

Developments in the running down of the men had their climax in the discovery in the entrance of Brown Park school in South Omaha of six large and two small registered mail pouches, the contents of which had been rifled.

Detectives Search School.

Following the arrest in the vicinity of the schoolhouse of three suspects as they were approaching a point where they had hidden revolvers and other material that were discovered by the boys, a hundred secret service men, private and city detectives early in the day began to search the locality for further evidence. The principal and teachers of Brown Park school were thrown into a small panic when they learned what had occurred during the night and an open basement window which had been discovered Monday morning formed the basis of an investigation.

Mrs. Nora Freeman, one of the teachers, noticed that a ladder used for reaching the attic of the building, and which is usually suspended from the ceiling by a rope, had been displaced and the janitor was called. Lanterns were procured and two men crawled into the attic. They were astounded to find eight registered mail sacks, two raincoats, a long topcoat and a pair of overalls. The police were notified and made a hurry-up trip to the school building.

All the Letters Opened.

An examination of the contents of the packages showed that every letter and package had been torn open and the contents of value removed. In each case the letters were stuck back into envelopes; the robbers having satisfied themselves with removing money and other valuables. There were several jewelry packages, the contents of which had been taken by the robbers.

The post office authorities and railroad officials are fully convinced that in the arrest of Woods, Gordon and Tortenson they have secured the right men. The chain of evidence already secured is, in the minds of the police sufficient to convict the men, and Chief Briggs believes he will be able to secure the confession from one of the trio. The only regret is that the fourth man should have escaped.

PRISON FOR PETOSKEY MAYOR.

Will Serve Fifteen Days for Striking a Fellow Physician.

Detroit, Mich., May 20.—Dr. J. J. Roycroft, mayor of Petoskey, Mich., will next Monday start to serve a 15 days' sentence in the county jail. Two years ago the Lockwood hospital was opened in Petoskey from a fund of $10,000 which was bequeathed by a former summer resident of Petoskey. The officials in charge of the hospital, soon after taking up their duties, were charged with unfair discrimination in choosing physicians by several Petoskey doctors.

The arguments were heated and during an operation over a patient Dr. Roycroft and another physician got into a battle and Roycroft struck the other doctor. He was convicted and fined $50 or 15 days. After the supreme court upheld the lower court Roycroft refused to pay the fine and the court says he will go to jail.

Associated Clubs Holding Their Annual Sessions in Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, May 20.—Graduates of Harvard university from all parts of the country are in Cincinnati in attendance on the national meeting of the Associated Harvard Clubs, which opened last night with a smoker at the Stanton hotel. The gathering this year is more than usually notable because of the presence of ex-President Eliot and of Prof. Abbott Lawrence (Lowell), who has succeeded Dr. Eliot as head of the great university.

The Harvard clubs of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other cities came on special trains, and the smoker was a joyous affair. A specially prepared Harvard song-book edited by Elliott Hunt Pendleton was given out; Owen Winter read an original ode to President Eliot; and a song to Prof. Lowell, written by John A. Carpenter of St. Louis was sung.

Today's program includes a bourgeois luncheon at the Cincinnati County club, an informal field day at the Cincinnati Golf club, and a great banquet this evening at the Stanton hotel.

Centerville, Ia., May 20.—A perfectly tied hangman's noose was found secreted in the courthouse near the room in which John Junkin, negro slayer of Clara Rosen, is kept during his trial for the murder of the Ottumwa chore singer.

Spectators at the trial were greatly wrought up as Chief of Police Gallagher told of the confession, which Junkin made and later repudiated. Detective John Gray also told how Junkin, describing the murder to him, telling how the girl groined as the negro dragged her to an old cellar.

Junkin made a futile break for liberty through a window of the grand jury room, in which he is confined on the third floor of the courthouse. Six armed men sat around Junkin's cot last night to guard him from lynching and to prevent his escape.

PLANS A NAVY PACT

GREAT BRITAIN HOPES FOR AN ALLIANCE WITH UNITED STATES.

WOULD CONTROL THE OCEANS

Powerful Fleet of England Will Guard the Atlantic and American Ships Go to Pacific If the Agreement Is Reached.

London, May 20.—Government officials and others who have been fearing war with Germany, are hoping that Ambassador Bryce is successful in the negotiations he has started at Washington, which provide for an alliance of the British and American navies.

In a nutshell the plan, which it is hoped, may be adopted, is for England to take care of the Atlantic ocean and the United States to look after the Pacific. Such an arrangement would give America a great advantage should she be forced into a conflict with Japan and would be of immense benefit to Great Britain should this country have to fight the Germans.

Asquith Sees the Advantage.

Premier Asquith had such an alliance in mind when speaking recently in what was regarded as a cryptic manner of the two-power standard for the British navy. The premier hopes that such an understanding may be reached with the American government as shall enable England almost to denude the Pacific of British warships of the formidable class in return for giving America certain assurances respecting the naval situation in the Atlantic.

The suggestions made by Mr. Asquith through Ambassador Bryce, follow the lines lately laid down in an article by Capt. Mahan on the international naval position, which has attracted wide attention in authoritative circles in England.

Feeling of the Cabinet.

The British cabinet feels that only an understanding with America can enable England to maintain the two-power standard in Europe.

"If the Americans will look after our interests in the Pacific," said a responsible naval authority, "we will take care of all American interests in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean. We recognize the difficulty of including America to break with the tradition of not entering into entangling alliances, but we are not without hope that the situation in the Pacific may lead the authorities in Washington to think favorably of the proposal which would admit of their concentrating the American naval strength in that ocean."

Japanese in Question.

The British government is inclined to seek a naval understanding with the United States on account of the possibility of Japan declining to renew the Anglo-Japanese alliance when it expires. The Australians never cease to urge the motherland to separate its policy from that of Japan in the Pacific and try to unite the strength of the English-speaking race in that part of the world.

FOUR MEN SAVE WARSHIP.

Risk Their Lives to Put Out Fire on the Albany.

Washington, May 20.—Through the prompt and efficient work of Louis Nolan, chief master-at-arms; R. A. Dill, chief carpenter's mate; William McConnell, plumber and fitter, and Archibald A. Irwin, gunner's mate, the United States cruiser Albany was saved from probable destruction by fire at Corinto, Nicaragua, April 22, according to a report from Capt. William S. Hanson.

The secretary of the navy has written a letter to Capt. Hanson directing him to inform those men of the department's appreciation of their good work in extinguishing the fire. Chief Master-at-Arms Nolan discovered the fire in the paint locker about 8:30 o'clock in the evening. Nolan, McConnell, Dill and Irwin went into the locker at personal peril and directed the streams of water on the fire. By their efforts it was soon brought under control.

The men ran from the bank without attracting attention and were out of the town before Moore could summon assistance. Police of East St. Louis, Madison, Granite City and other nearby places were informed and a posse was organized to pursue the robbers.

THE FLOWER SEED MAN

A Memorial Day Story

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

(Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association.)

It was the 29th of May, and Almina Stevens stood on her doorstep looking wistfully about her small garden. The large central bed was a desert of brown earth, with here and there a sprig of dandelion, daisy, and this bed should have fulfilled a cherished dream of Almina's heart. During the long, cold winter, when the outside world was bare and white, she had planned a great bed of forget-me-nots. It was to be a sea of pale blue loveliness, and on Memorial day its beauty was to cover a grave in the corner of the garden.

"I've allowed all the other flowers for the cemetery lot, and now I guess there won't be anything to put on Asaph's grave, after all," she thought despondently as she walked down the path to a tangled mass of shrubbery that hid one corner of the garden. Here, screened from curious eyes by a network of young cedars entwined with woodbine and ivy, was a long, low mound, at the head of which was a broad, thin marble slab, with an epitaph lettered in queer black characters:

STRANGER, PAUSE AND DROP A TEAR ON THIS LONELY GRAVE OF ONE WHO BLOODED HIS BURNED BLOOD BUT STILLY NEATH OCEAN'S WAVE.

TO THE TENDER MEMORY OF ASAPH.

Almina had made this grave, hidden securely from prying neighbor eyes, fifteen years before. She had found the marble top of an old table in the garret and dragged it punitively to the spot, where she set it in a deep hole hollowed in the soft earth. With paint brush she had printed the carefully composed verse and the inscription.

Tears of disappointment gathered in Almina's eyes as she walked slowly back to the house, and consequently she did not see that there was a busy standing before her gate and that a man was coming briskly toward her.

"Good-day, ma'am. I'm the flower seed man. Can I sell you any seeds or plants for your garden today?" He raised his straw hat and looked at Almina's surprised and tearful eyes with respectful sympathy.

"I guess not—I don't know. What have you got?" Almina blushed warmly and winked back the telltale tears from her blue eyes. When Almina Stevens blushed she looked very young and pretty.

The good looking flower seed man took this in fact. He whipped a leather-covered catalogue from his pocket and said: "I guess it's easier to tell what I haven't got than what I have! I'll take your order today for seeds or plants or bulbs, and they'll be delivered to you within a week. You've got a pretty garden here."

"It will be nice later on," returned Almina gloomily.

"I see you haven't anything in that central bed."

"I had it planted with forget-me-nots, and they all died," said Almina resentfully.

The man smiled. "That was your fault, Miss Stevens. You shouldn't plant forget-me-nots in an open, sunny place like that."

"They want a moist, shady spot. I should think over there would be a good place," he pointed to the enclosed corner of the garden.

Almina started. "I never thought of planting them there," she said. "I'm dreadfully disappointed about the forget-me-nots not doing well."

"That's too bad. I suppose you've got graves to decorate."

Almina nodded. She liked the look of the flower seed man, and she thought him very handsome when he smiled and displayed rows of even white teeth beneath the brown mustache. "You can lend me some forget-me-not seeds. I don't know just how many I'll need," she said wistfully.

"That's easily found out," said the man, and before Almina could utter a word of protest he was striding rapidly toward the corner where the white marble stone was hidden behind the cedars.

"I see. I hope you'll excuse me, Miss Stevens. I know—how it is. You kinder like to have this quiet place to come to when you're feeling lonely."

Almina nodded assent. "I was going to put the forget-me-nots on the mound," she said at last.

"You should have planted them here, then. They'd have grown all right. I'll bring you some plants tomorrow to put in here."

"I'm much obliged, Mr.—" Almina stammered as she realized into what intimate conversation she had wandered with the stranger.

"Habeck, ma'am—George Habeck. I'll be here in the morning. I won't disappoint you."

"There was a smile of pleasant retrospection in Almina's lips as she watched the flower seed man drive away through the May sunshine.

The next morning she was up at break of day busily denuding her garden of its blooms. When the sun sent its first rays across the green fields she had been to the cemetery on the hill and laid her offerings of pink and white and blue blooms on the graves of her kinsfolk.

She found herself wishing that nothing would prevent the flower seed man's coming. He was very interesting! Here Almina blushed and hurried into the house, where she blushed again as she slipped on a blue muslin dress and pinned the collar with a little gold brooch. It was many years since Almina had worn blue muslin—so many years that she was ashamed to meet her own eyes in the mirror—and went downstairs and into the garden hoping the flower seed man would not be late.

Presently he came and at the quick glance of respectful admiration Almina felt that the blue muslin was quite justified. "I've brought the plants," he called, coming toward her with a long box, and then they walked toward the enclosure.

"Those are lovely," cried Almina. "I couldn't get forget-me-nots, but these mean something pretty—heartsease, you know—and I guess that's what most of us need."

Almina found herself blushing again. "I suppose it is," she said faintly. "It's pleasant to remember your friends after they're gone," she added.

The flower seed man drew a trowel from his pocket and began to dig the soft earth of the mound. "All my folks are alive," he said apologetically. "I say, Miss Stevens, I hope you don't stay round this dump spot very much. It ain't healthy." He turned a look of concern toward Almina.

"I come sometimes," she faltered. "Well, you take my advice and only come when the sun shines on this particular spot, and—great Scott!" He sat back on his heels and looked at the headstone for the first time. "Did you write that, ma'am?" he asked soberly.

Almina nodded. "It's a very pretty verse, but that name—Asaph—it's a queer name. I never heard it but once before. The fellow that had it married my cousin Annie, and I guess he's got his hands full."

"I always thought Asaph was a pretty name," said Almina. "So did I till I met with Asaph Winkleton."

Almina uttered a frightened little cry and sank to her knees on the bare ground. "What name did you say?" she cried tremulously.

"Asaph Winkleton, ma'am. I hope you're not sick. Let me help you up." There was deep concern in the flower seed man's face.

"That's his name," she said breathlessly, pointing to the mound.

"Good Lord!"

"The flower seed man and Almina Stevens stared at one another until Almina uttered a hysterical little laugh. "He was drowned at sea," she gasped.

"Thunderation! He was not! The man—excuse me! Our Asaph was a sailor till he got wrecked and had the everlasting life scared out of him." With a quick movement he drew a leather case from his pocket and drew from it a photograph. "There's a picture of our family group, Miss Stevens, including our Asaph. Do you recognize him?"

Almina took the picture with quivering fingers, looked at it and gave it back with a sigh of relief. "Yes," she said constrainedly. "It's Asaph, but he's grown awful fat!"

The flower seed man did not answer. He was uprooting the marble slab and thrusting it out of sight among the underbrush. Then he leveled the mound with quick strokes of his trowel. "Come out into the sunshine, Miss Stevens," he said, grasping the box of plants, and together they went into the garden and planted the pansies in the central bed.

As for Asaph Winkleton—he was left to the tender mercies of Cousin Annie, and in time Almina learned what that really meant!

The Two Offerings

Legend of the New Memorial Day

By RICHARD WYSE.

A MAN who tottered under many years met beside a grave a maiden who was fair to look upon. He stooped to place across the little mound a wreath, and as he rose she put a bunch of fragrant flowers beside his offering.

The old man looked at her, and there was wonder in his eyes. "My son lies buried here," he said.

"MY SON LIES BURIED HERE."

Tears trembled on the maiden's drooping lashes, but she was silent. "His grave," the old man said, "was here a score of years ere you were born, and yet you come to decorate it, and you weep above him as one who mourned a brother or a dearer one."

The maiden twined her fingers together and looked down at the little stone whereon was carved the name of the hero who had gone.

"You decorate his grave," she said at last, "because he was your son."

"Yes," the white-haired man replied, "he was my son, and he died for the cause that was near to my heart."

"And I put flowers upon his grave," the maiden said, "not that he was my father, not that he was my brother, not that he was my lover, but because he was all three, and more, to me. I am the spirit of the new Memorial day."

Then she drew closer to the man upon whom rested many years and sought to take his hand, when, lo, she found that it was without substance! He was

"THE SPIRIT OF THE NEW MEMORIAL DAY."

"He was my son, and he died for the cause that was near to my heart."

GUN POCKET FOR BELT

Holds Butt of Musket and Leaves Soldier's Arms Free.

Soldiers who have tramped miles on a hot day, in parade or on a "mike," with their muskets growing heavier every hour, will hail with joy the invention of a Chicago man. This is a gun-pocket which fastens to the belt and makes the firearm as easy to "mike" that it is scarcely noticed. The carrier consists of a leather pocket slung to hold the butt of a musket and a strap which runs over the right shoulder. The strap has a shoulder pad and a hook, which engages the gun barrel. The musket is rested in the pocket, which fastens to the belt and hangs over the hip, and the hook keeps it always in position parallel to the body line. The soldier need not worry about the position of the gun in any way. In a long tramp across country roads the freedom of both arms and the ability to swing them is a great assistance in keeping up a rapid and steady gait.

FOOLISH QUESTIONS—NO. 15.

Not that Way.

There was a man in the car who was talking very loudly of hard times and lack of work and the dissatisfaction of the masses, when another spoke up and said: "No far as you are concerned you have only yourself to blame. I recognize you as one of the men who asked my advice about betting on the election last fall."

"Yes, I did."

"Do you remember what I told you?"

"You said bet on Bryan."

"If I had heard where I was now? Mayhap you haven't heard he wasn't in it when they counted up the votes?"

"But I didn't advise you to bet that he would be elected last fall. No! I know he couldn't be."

"Then why was it?"

"I advised you, sir, to bet that if Mr. Bryan lived long enough and ran often enough he would ultimately be elected President of the United States. Got the thing correct, sir?"

"And what good would it have done me to bet that way, even if I could have elected out?"

"Why, you would have something to look forward to in the dim future."

CITY DADS ARE ON THEIR GUARD

MOORE TO LEAVE NO LOOP-HOLES IN WALRATH CASE.

LISTENED TO ARGUMENTS

Of Opposing Council Last Evening

And Then Decided to Defer Taking of Evidence Till

Tonight.

After listening to the arguments of both attorneys last evening in the matter of the revocation of Mrs. Margaret Walrath's saloon license, the common council, during a prolonged recess, decided to defer the taking of evidence and final action until this evening at seven o'clock, and in lieu of adjournment, on suggestion of

Mayor Carlo, voted to take a recess and to have the trial continued until that time. It is understood that another attorney was to be called in consultation by the city before proceeding further with the case.

To Quash Proceedings.

Attorney J. J. Cunningham, appearing on motion for the propriety of the Union House bar, and moved to quash the proceedings on the following grounds:

(1) That the common council's order of May 24 and the summons thereof attached are not based upon a complaint made in writing and under oath as required by the revised statutes. Because, if it was intended that the present proceeding should be based upon the complaint of March 29, then the fact that that complaint as well as the proceedings which followed it belong to the realm of "re-judgment" (the circuit court having ordered that said action of respondent be reversed and set aside, with costs taxed against the city) has been overlooked.

(2) That the said complaint was insufficient upon which to base a proceeding of this nature because it did not state facts which, even if admitted to be true, would constitute a cause of action. The council elaborated this point with the declaration that whereas City Ordinance No. 101 contains some ten prohibitions, the complaint had not stated which one of the provisions had been violated and was at fault, gratuitously, to such a degree that it only charged his effort with keeping her place open and unlocked for the purpose of retelling higher, which she had a perfect right to do under her license. Counsel cited what he claimed to be the parallel clause of the State vs. Sullivan

(8th Wisconsin, page 188) and the supreme court decision, in support of this second contention.

City Attorney Maxfield, in answer to these contentions, declared that Judge Grimm, in his decision refusing to quash the writ of certiorari had also called attention, in no unemph-atic terms, to the duty of the common council to issue a new summons on the original complaint. The supreme court had also held in the Madison case that when a complaint had been filed it was the duty of the common council to take up that complaint and revoke the license.

Secondly, the city attorney maintained that the charge of selling liquor on Sunday was as explicitly set forth in the complaint that it was not only unnecessary to cite the particular provision of the ordinance which had been violated but, indeed, the complaint would be valid if no ordinance, whatever, was invoked, the offense being a violation of the statutes as well as the city charter.

To Repair Fire Station.

Ald. Evans stated that as chairman of the committee on public buildings his attention had been called to the serious state of disrepair of the engine on the Spring Brook fire station.

An investigation had been made by the committee and the condition as represented found to exist. On motion they were directed to have the necessary repairs made.

On motion of Ald. Richardson the clerk was instructed to purchase a pair of rubber boots and a rubber apron for the use of the fire department.

On motion of Ald. Scott the street commissioner was instructed to build a brick crosswalk over St. Mary's avenue on the east side of Yuba street.

Aldermen Brown and Dull were absent from the meeting.

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

THE rates defend me from the blatant truth teller.

I know several people who are continually saying disagreeable things solely in order to impress people with their lack of education. They seem to look upon fact as a species of grack, an object to get something for nothing, and to think that being cantankerous and rubbing people the wrong way is more truthful than being complimentary.

But to me their arrogant, blustering, blatant truth telling is quite as much an affectation and pose as an attempt to say pleasant things all the time.

A young newspaper man who is particularly enamored of this affectation of unfeelingness met a friend of mine the other day. She came to me later with her tale of woe.

"What do you think he said?" she inquired. "Why, he came up to me in the restaurant and said, 'You usually have him at all well, other—and said, 'You usually have a slightly good looking lady, Miss Hartwell, but that hat's ugly. And what under the sun have you been doing to your hair?'"

I explained to the indignant young lady that this outburst was probably due to the desire which the person in question cherishes, of being truthful on all occasions.

But even that did not mollify her.

"Truthful," said she, "truthful? But why did he have to say anything? I didn't ask his opinion. He didn't need to tell me it was pretty, but he could have kept still about it, couldn't he? I call it nothing more or less than rudeness pure and simple."

Which was a verdict with which I quite thoroughly agreed.

I have a friend who is always saying pretty things. If you are blue it is a joy to meet her, for she will always have some nice thing that she has heard about you to tell you or something complimentary about your costume, your appearance or your accomplishments to say to you.

People are perpetually calling her hypocritical and insincere. Some one accused her of these things in my presence the other day.

"I'm not," she said, "I mean every word I say. It's simply that I say the nice things that I hear and think instead of the disagreeable ones."

Now if complimentary people really think the nice things they say—as this girl did and as many of them do—why is their speech as hypocritical as the silence of those who never say the nice things they think, or any more the poor tan the blatant truth telling of those who go out of their way to say disagreeable things?

The Persian Code says, "Better tell a lie and be happy than tell the truth and be unhappy."

I most decidedly disagree with that, as I think that a lie one tells to save oneself is one of the meanest things in the world, but I would make it over into

"Better be silent and let the people around you be happy than be forever telling blatant unnecessary truths and making everyone unhappy."
